Crystal Herron, PhD

crystal.herron@redwoodink.com

www.redwoodink.com

Dr. Herron has a PhD in biomedical science and has worked as a scientific writer and editor since 2013. She works with scientists to develop their skills in clear, concise, compelling writing; clients have included members of the National Academies and Nobel Prize winners.

Donna Ingles, MS, MPH

donna.j.ingles@vumc.org

Donna has an MS degree in medicinal chemistry and an MPH in epidemiology and global communicable diseases. For more than a decade, she has written, edited, and provided scientific direction for grants, manuscripts, and other scientific materials, including as a freelance editor for Wiley-VCH. Turnaround time varies depending on availability.

Payment: As a Vanderbilt employee, Donna is paid by percent effort, so she needs to have a cost center number that she can charge for work performed.

Kim Korwek, PhD

kim.korwek@gmail.com

Dr. Korwek has a PhD in neuroscience from Vanderbilt and seven years experience as a medical writer and editor. Editing includes refining logic/organization, improving style and flow, and clarifying meaning. Kim will also copy edit (grammar, spelling, punctuation, consistency of word choice, etc.) plus checks for adherence to journal guidelines.

Carol E. Lorenz, PhD

carol_lorenz@unc.edu

Dr. Lorenz brings more than a decade of grant coordination and medical writing experience to teaching teams how to systematically prepare for grant submission.
